GREENEST THUMB

“ABBY CLOUGH LAWLESS has a deep understanding of plants, especially what grows well where. That sounds like an obvious requirement for a landscape architect, but you’d be surprised at how many don’t get, or care about, this part of design. Picking things that do well on their own is good for the environment. And for people who own gardens.”

—Edwina Von Gal, who has created landscapes around the world and started the PRFCT Earth Project, which encourages gardeners not to use pesticides.
